

Microaggressions in the Workplace Project Results

This project found that power relationships in the workplace impact the type of microaggressions that are perpetrated, how the target responds, and how bystanders respond. Additionally, a new category of microaggressions – microignore – emerged.